

Ideas Riding: June 28, 1966

An astronomical observatory on Mars would permit observations of astronomical parallaxes to be improved by about fifty percent since the number of stars increases with the volume of the distance. The number of new parallaxes achieved in this way will be 1.5^3 or a factor of 3.4.